

Cheryl Avioli worked for eight years as a senior regulator in New York, including two years on the New York Public Service Commission and six on the New York State Racing and Wagering Board. Prior to that, she worked as a public policy and public relations consultant for more than a decade serving clients such as McDonald's Corp., Marine Midland Bank, and the New York State Dental Association.

Avioli has a master's degree in public relations from Boston University and a bachelor's degree in marketing from State University of New York at Plattsburgh. She also studied international business at the University of Copenhagen in Denmark.

Avioli is a past member of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners, having served on the Committee on Energy Resources and the Environment and as regional whip for NARUC government affairs.

She serves on the Salvation Army's Central Kentucky Area Services Advisory Board and volunteers with the Ronald McDonald House in Lexington.

She resides in Nicholasville with her husband, Greg.
